DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 2, 11, 13, 16, 19, 21, 24, 25, 32, 35 and 60-65 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent 5,861,128 to Vick et al.

Regarding claims 1, 13, 21, 24, 64 and 65 Vick discloses an air freshener device (10) having a coherent elastomer body (11) and a scent material interspersed within the body (12), with the elastomer body is a polyurethane foam (Col. 3, line 9). As per claim 2, the polymer body, as shown in Fig. 1, has a self-supporting three-dimensional shape. As per claim 11, polyurethane foam is, by definition, a thermoplastic elastomer. As per claim 13 and 25, the scent material interspersed within the polymer body is scented oil (Col. 3, line 14, with the word "solvent" defining the "oil"). As per claim 16 and 32, the polyurethane foam of Vick et al. ('128) features a plurality of indentations, as holes are formed in the foam substrate during final polymerization. As per claim 19, 35 and part of claim 60, the air freshener of Vick et al. ('128) features a hanger (40) that suspends the body in an existing air filter (34).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 3-6, 27-30, and 37-41 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 5,861,128 to Vick et al.

The rejection of claims 1 and 21 serve as the basis of rejection for claims 3-6 and 27-30, respectively. However, the following will address claims 37-41 first, and can be considered as an associative rejection of claims 3-6 and claims 27-30, as they address the same information.

Regarding claim 37, Vick et al. ('128) teaches an air freshener (10) device having a carrier material that is flexible and compressible under an applied force, and resilient and substantially returnable to an original configuration upon removal of the applied force; and a scent material interspersed within the carrier material, capable of diffusing out of the polymer carrier material to surrounding air, the carrier material being a polyurethane foam. Vick et al. ('128) does not teach a pad with a tacky attachment surface configured and cling to a support surface, however, one of ordinary skill in the art would have the ability to use a common double-sided sticky tape to secure the air freshening device to an existing air filter as shown in Fig. 6. Double-sided sticky tape is well known in the art and would comprise the claimed tacky attachment surface (the glue) as well as the pad and barrier (the foam surface that the glue of the tape is applied to). As per claims 4, 30 and 41, sticky tape as a "pad" is flexible and can be deformed to a shape of a support surface. Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have provided a pad with tacky attachment surface, comprising a barrier, in the form of double-sided sticky tape to the air freshener device of Vick et al. ('128) in order to provide additional mounting strength to the attachment of the air freshener to an existing air filter.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 52-59 are allowed.

Claims 7, 8, 14, 15, 17, 18, 20, 21, 24, 26, 31, 33, 34, 36, 41-43 and 47-51 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
